Approach to Remuneration

This policy outlines our firm's approach to remuneration. The objective of our remuneration policy is to ensure that our firm does not remunerate or assess the performance of any of our employees in a way that conflicts with our duty to act in the best interests of our clients.

We will not make any arrangement by way of remuneration, sales targets or otherwise that could provide an incentive to our employees to recommend a product or service to a client when our firm could offer a different solution, or none at all, where that would better meet the needs of that client.

Our firm maintains a separate conflicts of interest policy, which determines our overall approach to identifying, preventing and/or managing all types of conflicts including firm level arrangements and our firm's requirements in relation to gifts and hospitality payments.

All our staff will be made aware of this policy to highlight and emphasise the importance of acting in accordance with our firm's policies and procedures.

Oversight

Our firm's senior management will have the overall responsibility to ensure that our firm operates remuneration practices that aim to ensure that our firm acts in the best interests of our clients at all times and in line with the FCA's rules and guidance.

The senior management of our firm will be responsible for the day-to-day implementation of our remuneration policy and the monitoring of compliance risks related to this policy.

Our remuneration policy will be reviewed annually in accordance with SYSC 19G and the policy and its reviews will be conducted to ensure our firm's remuneration practices, of any kind, does not affect our ability to ensure a solid capital base at all times.

The objectives of the Policy are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • To attract, retain and motivate talented employees of the quality required to manage the business successfully, whilst ensuring that remuneration is not excessive or detrimental to the health of the firm as a whole, including its clients. • To motivate and reward good, long term performance. • To meet relevant regulatory requirements, including the requirements of the FCA Remuneration Code The principles of the Policy are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • To ensure that total remuneration is set at a level that is competitive versus peers, taking account of size, complexity and sector, whilst taking into account market practice. • To maintain appropriate proportions of fixed and performance-related pay, to help to drive performance over the short and longer term, maintain a flexible cost base, and avoid creating incentives for excessive risk taking. • To align incentive plans with the business strategy, prudent risk management and client interests. • To ensure that culture and values are prioritised when assessments are made. • To consider ESG factors in assessments. Our company's risk tolerance is aligned with our commitment to delivering long-term value to our clients while prudently managing investment risks. We strive to achieve attractive risk-adjusted returns within an acceptable risk framework. Our risk tolerance is guided by the following firm values: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Preservation of Capital • Consistency of Returns • Client Outcomes • Long term thinking • Regulatory and Legal Compliance

- Market and Economic Conditions
- Risk-Return Trade off
- Transparency and Communication

This risk tolerance framework is linked to remuneration as follows:

1. Identification of Key Risk-Taking Roles: This includes senior managers, certified persons, and employees who have the authority to make decisions that can significantly affect the company's risk profile, including investment decisions.
2. Performance Metrics: Our performance metrics reflect both financial and non-financial aspects of risk management. These metrics are specific, measurable, attainable, relevant, and time-bound (SMART) and aligned with the company's risk appetite. Examples of performance metrics include risk-adjusted returns, compliance with risk limits, risk mitigation efforts, and adherence to risk management policies.
3. Incorporation of Risk Metrics into Remuneration: Integration of risk metrics identified into our remuneration policy. This involves linking a portion of employees' variable compensation (such as bonuses) to the achievement of risk-related targets. The proportion of variable compensation tied to risk metrics reflects the significance of risk-taking responsibilities in each role.
4. Evaluating Performance and Risk Culture: We regularly assess individual and team performance against the established risk metrics. This evaluation considers not only the outcomes but also the risk management processes employed. Additionally, we foster a risk-aware culture by promoting open communication, accountability, and ethical behaviour throughout the organisation.
5. Awareness and Positive Application of ESG Principles: Staff members must always consider environmental, social and governance factors when making both business and investment decisions. Our firm strives to 'think long term' and behave in a way that does not prioritise short term goals over long term performance.
6. Variation of Remuneration: Based on the performance evaluations, remuneration is adjusted accordingly. We recognise and reward employees who demonstrate sound risk management practices, achieve risk-related targets, and contribute to the organisation's risk culture. Conversely, we consider reducing or withholding remuneration for individuals or teams that take excessive risks or fail to meet risk-related expectations.
7. Monitor and Review: We continuously monitor and review the effectiveness of the risk appetite-remuneration linkage. This includes assessing whether the remuneration policy is effectively incentivising desired risk behaviours and driving appropriate risk management practices. Adjustments may be necessary over time to ensure continued alignment with the company's evolving risk landscape.
